Lola

A pretty pleaser, the Lola adapts beautifully to any setting, depending on the fabric of choice. In tweed, it's ideal for a masculine office and in velvet, it's just right for a feminine décor. Featuring bolsters that are sewn into the cushion to serve as arms, the sofa seems to float over its light wood frame. A low tight seat and back complete its universal appeal.

Robert

A barrel chair with well-rounded appeal, the Robert makes a striking statement from any vantage point. Thanks to beautiful inset wood in the curved back, this chair charms from every angle. It's also gender-friendly, with a seating back that's high enough to scoop in feminine proportions and yet fully support a man's frame. The curvaceous, cut-out chair also features exposed wood base and legs, signature elements of its award-winning designer, Michael Wolk.

Luxe

The ultimate in glamorous seating, the Luxe makes a sophisticated statement that brings back Deco, the divine Dorothy Draper and 1930's classic fashion. Designed to encompass all of the above, this sofa exudes style, with biscuit-tufted cushions that feature buttons on the back, seat and inner arms. Designed by John Charles Designs, the piece also boasts a firm supportive seat for nestling happily into the low shelter sofa frame. The sofa is also available in extra long, a boon for the right room.

Kristina

Diminutive yet dynamic, the Kristina is one of the smallest-scaled sofa and sleeper collections available, making it a boon to apartment living and tight space settings. As a sleeper, a queen-sized bed fits into an area of only 69-inches. Narrow arms lend a feminine line to the sofa and loose back cushions keep the mood casual. Welt cord piping provides an elegant design touch.

Norbit

To create a clean, commanding presence in any room, the Norbit is up to the task. This large sectional, designed by John Charles Designs, is as welcoming as it is contemporary, thanks to angled loose back cushions that lean slightly backward for comfort and style. Deck and arm scoop around the seat cushions to underscore the lean look of the collection. Metal legs complete the modern look of this high-style design.
